NEWSLETTER November 2026 Vol. 2, No. 12

The Time is NOW!

I struggled to find a topic for this month's newsletter, something new that I haven't dissected previously. The world seems to be in chaos wherever you look so there were plenty of news stories in my in-box and, of course, literally thousands of videos on FaceBook, NewsMax and X.com. There is no point in wasting time on the fake news media as they are all in lockstep that everything is fine and if it isn't, it's all Trump's fault.

I found two videos by young women who stood above the rest. Both fearless, both so intellectually superior to the bland soup the news media prefers and certainly not the type of pre-programmed talking heads hired by those in control. They don't bow down to any political party. These women are not Americans but have one clear message for our country.

Erin Molan tells it like it is without apologies. She shows an ad run by a candidate in Minnesota and fills in the blanks with taut political analysis.

Eva Vlaardingerbroek has a website filled with FACTS and clear-eyed scrutiny of the invasion of islam into Christian countries.

Yes, I have been including quite a bit of information about islam in these newsletters because it is the biggest threat to America. My third suggestion is a video by quite a controversial figure: Mark Driscoll. Mr. Driscoll has 4 million followers and has described the invasion in Europe as being in Stage 3 of 4. It IS here in America and people ARE suffering. It will only get worse.

Lastly, visit Amy Mekelburg, Founder & Editor-in-Chief – RAIR Foundation. Her personal story of exposing islam is an example of incredible courage in the face of outrageous retaliation.

The democrat party is destroying itself from within and plans to destroy the whole country with DEI (pretty much stopped by Donald J. Trump), open borders, acceptance of transgenderism, and massive fraud found in cities, counties and states across the country.

Why do I think I know what's going to happen? Because I have been interested in politics for over 60 years and watched several different Presidents attempt to place their imprint on America. I read and I research.

When you read history, it is abundantly clear that islam is NOT a religion but a cult which includes invading other countries, claiming their own women are less than half a man, beating them for any reason, and in Iran killing hundreds of thousands of its own citizens. There is nothing religious about that.

If you took the time to watch the videos suggested, you will definitely have a better idea of what this "culture" is about: invading and conquering. I don't want that in America.

But America isn't only divided by islam invaders. The Democrat Party has openly embraced Medicare for all, erasing choice in healthcare and, if looking at Canada as an example, guaranteeing no one sees a doctor in any reasonable time frame. Dems want to "restructure" ICE or just cancel them, thus allowing criminal illegal aliens free rein everywhere. Strong support of the "Green New Deal" by the Dems concedes God is not in charge of the weather on earth and we can continue to waste millions and accomplish nothing. The very worst item they want is to allow abortion with public funding at any time or place for any reason or no reason at all. Why is murdering babies so important to them?

The world has opened its borders to the islamic invaders and France in particular is paying the price. Don't think for a minute that America will escape unscathed. You won't see any cautionary tales from the mainstream media as they work diligently to cover up what's coming. They have abandoned the truth for some reason I cannot fathom.

America's culture is founded on Judeo/Christian values and incontestably described in our US Constitution and Bill of Rights. No other country in the world has as many guaranteed freedoms as we do.

If we continue to elect muslims to our governing bodies, how long will we be able to count on the 2nd Amendment for the right to defend ourselves? If the next President is weaker than Donald J. Trump, will s/he open the borders again and allow the invasion to recommence? If we allow our education system to be infested with teachers more interested in DEI than American history, will our children be able to save the United States of America? Think! Vote RED!

— Sally Gillies

President's Message

Are you satisfied with the results of our recent primary elections? In my view, the Ormond Beach City Commission and mayoral election was deeply disappointing. Our newly elected mayor, Lori Tolland, won with 51% of the votes cast. However, those votes represented only about 5% of the city's total registered voters. Are you comfortable with such a small share of the electorate determining the direction of city government?

I believe primary elections should be eliminated in favor of a single general election in which voters choose among all candidates. Early voting should also be limited to one week; two weeks seems excessive and, in my opinion, creates greater opportunity for abuse or fraud.

Under the current system, elections no longer feel like a right exercised by the people, as envisioned by the Constitution. Instead, they have become heavily influenced by wealthy interests that may care little about grassroots voters or the good of the community.

Sadly, elected officials and candidates, aided by powerful financial interests, are steadily eroding what remains of our magnificent republic.

I will close with words attributed to our first president, George Washington—words I strongly believe remain relevant today.

— Chuck Collins

"However political parties may now and then answer popular ends, they are likely in the course of time and things, to become potent engines, by which cunning, ambitious, and unprincipled men will be enabled to subvert the power of the people and to usurp for themselves the reins of government, destroying afterwards the very engines which have lifted them to unjust dominion."

President Donald Trump and Vice President JD Vance deliver an announcement from the Oval Office at the White House

Trump and Vance Address the Nation as DOGE and the House Committee Keep Exposing the Scams

President Trump and Vice President JD Vance spoke from the Oval Office today while the work of Elon Musk's Department of Government Efficiency and the House DOGE Subcommittee continues to surface the scale of government waste, fraud, and abuse.

Musk and DOGE opened the books on programs that had operated for years with little scrutiny. The House Oversight Subcommittee on Delivering on Government Efficiency, chaired by Marjorie Taylor Greene and backed by Chairman James Comer, held hearings that put hard numbers in front of the public. Those numbers come from GAO reports the agencies themselves have filed for two decades. They show a long-running pattern of improper payments that should never have gone out the door.

Here is a reference list of the key figures highlighted by DOGE and the committee. Readers can keep it for tracking:

$2.8 trillion: Cumulative improper payments reported by federal agencies since fiscal year 2003. Improper means the money should not have been paid or was paid in the wrong amount. Most were overpayments. Chairman Comer cited this total at the subcommittee's first hearing.

$162 billion: Improper payments estimated for fiscal year 2024 across 68 programs. About 84 percent were overpayments. Five big programs (Medicare, Medicaid, Earned Income Tax Credit, SNAP, and one pandemic fund) accounted for most of it.

$186 billion: Improper payments estimated for fiscal year 2025. The cumulative total since 2003 now sits near $3 trillion.

$233 billion to $521 billion: GAO's range for annual fraud losses across the federal government. The higher end reflects high-risk periods such as pandemic programs.

Roughly $382 million: Fraudulent unemployment insurance claims since 2020 that DOGE flagged in an initial survey. That included claims from people listed as over 115 years old ($59 million), children ages 1–5 ($254 million), and people with birth dates more than 15 years in the future ($69 million). One claim used a 2154 birth year. The Labor Department confirmed the findings and said it is recovering the money.

USAID and related foreign-aid items DOGE spotlighted:

$45 million for DEI scholarships in Burma.

$520 million for consultant-driven ESG investments in Africa.

$20 million for a Sesame Street program in Iraq.

$10 million for voluntary medical male circumcision in Mozambique.

$59 million for hotel housing of illegal immigrants in New York.

Smaller items such as a transgender opera in Colombia, a transgender comic book in Peru, and DEI musical events abroad.

DEI and related grants terminated: Examples include $101 million in DEI training grants at the Department of Education and multiple multi-million-dollar DEI and gender-equity programs at USAID and other agencies that DOGE listed on its Wall of Receipts.

$180–$215 billion: DOGE's own Wall of Receipts total for claimed savings from canceled contracts, grants, leases, and workforce reductions in its early months. The subcommittee has treated that figure as the starting point Congress must lock in permanently.

About $400 million: Savings from nearly 700 canceled federal office leases covering millions of square feet, according to DOGE and GSA figures discussed in later subcommittee hearings.

The subcommittee's first hearing focused on improper payments and fraud. Witnesses described how weak front-end identity checks and self-certification let fraud rings and ineligible recipients drain programs. Private-sector fraud rates run around 3 percent; federal rates are far higher. Comer noted that Democrats once joined Republicans in condemning the problem, then switched to defending the bureaucracy once DOGE started acting. Greene's panel has continued the work with hearings on foreign aid, real-estate holdings, and other areas where money left the Treasury without clear benefit to American taxpayers.

Musk's team also cleaned Social Security records that still listed millions of people as alive long after any realistic lifespan and after decades of no activity. Those database errors created openings for improper payments. Unemployment systems showed similar gaps with claims filed under impossible ages and dates.

The Oval Office address today sits against that backdrop. Trump and Vance have repeatedly tied the efficiency effort to protecting taxpayers and reducing the debt load that now carries interest payments larger than the entire defense budget. The House committee's job is to make the identified cuts permanent through legislation rather than leaving them as temporary administrative pauses.

The numbers above are the ones DOGE and the subcommittee put in public view. They give a concrete reference for how large the improper-payment problem has grown and which specific programs and grants were flagged first. Congress can use them to write the rules that stop the same payments from going out again.

The Bright Report

Jennifer Bright, Candidate for Ormond Beach Zone 2

When Big Money and Dirty Politics Come to City Hall

Local government may feel close to home, but the forces influencing it can be anything but small. Decisions made by a city commission affect our neighborhoods, roads, utilities, development, taxes, and access to public information. That's why we should pay attention to who is trying to shape those decisions—and how.

Money in politics is not automatically evidence of wrongdoing. Candidates need resources to print materials, communicate with voters, and organize campaigns. But large contributions, and the appearance of special access, can weaken public confidence. Residents may reasonably wonder whether a decision serves the community or whether powerful donors and well-connected groups have had greater influence.

These concerns are especially significant in local races, where a relatively small number of voters may decide the outcome and campaign spending can have an outsized impact. A well-funded campaign can dominate mailboxes, websites, and social media, while residents with fewer resources may struggle to make their voices heard. When voters cannot easily see who paid for a message, or what interests may stand behind it, it becomes harder to assess the information they receive.

Dirty politics adds another layer. Personal attacks, misleading claims, selective use of facts, and rumors can distract from the issues voters need to consider. They can discourage qualified people from serving and leave residents more cynical about public life. Vigorous disagreement is healthy in a democracy; deception and intimidation are not. Candidates and elected officials should explain their positions, correct errors, and debate policy without turning neighbors into enemies.

The answer is not to assume every donation is improper or every political disagreement is a scandal. It is to insist on clear standards and public accountability. Voters can review campaign finance reports, ask candidates who supports their campaigns, and look for original documents behind political claims. Candidates can make disclosures easier to understand, avoid misleading attacks, and explain how they would address potential conflicts of interest.

City government also has a responsibility to make its work accessible. Meeting agendas, contracts, budgets, votes, and public records should be easy to find and understand. Residents should have a meaningful opportunity to speak before decisions are made, not after the outcome is settled. Transparency does not guarantee agreement, but it helps people understand how decisions are reached and hold officials accountable.

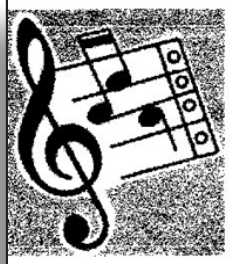

Local politics belongs to the people who live with the consequences. It should not be shaped only by those with the biggest budgets or the easiest access to decision-makers. Every resident deserves a fair chance to be heard, and every candidate should be judged by their ideas, conduct, and record—not by rumors or the size of their campaign.

A healthier political culture starts with a simple expectation: tell the truth, disclose who is paying, make decisions in public, and put residents first. When we demand those standards, we make it harder for money and dirty tactics to drown out the voices of our community.

Is There A Fight Brewing???

We are at a point in our history, as we were pre-1861, when numerous states feel like they do not have to go along with lawful federal oversight or do they feel a need to acknowledge, or recognize, federal jurisdiction. We all know what that mindset led to, and it was the Civil War. It was a conflict fought on moral grounds, but also on legal grounds. The loss of life was great. And what for? Back then, several states seceded from the Union and that President Abraham Lincoln could not, and would not, allow. But it happened. As a man who revered the United States Constitution, and the rule of law, Lincoln knew that this rebellious act had to be reversed.

Today, we are facing another challenge to the authority of the United States Constitution, the U.S. President and SCOTUS, and this is why. Within the United States, 11 out of 50 states have declared sanctuary status, and the District of Columbia is also a sanctuary jurisdiction. The majority of jurisdictions within the U.S. that have declared themselves sanctuaries came about after 2000. Many of you will not be surprised by the states on this list.

California — In October 2017, California became a sanctuary state and is the most populous state in the nation. However, as many as 16 cities have filed lawsuits against sanctuary policies and passed their own local ordinances contrary to the state's sanctuary policies. So, immigrants should be aware of the areas in the state where they have protections.

Colorado — Immigration and Customs Enforcement (ICE) officers are prohibited by state sanctuary legislation to enter courthouses and make arrests of non-citizens.

Connecticut — Under the state's sanctuary policies, state and local law enforcement may not honor most ICE immigration detainers.

Illinois — In 2017, Illinois became a sanctuary state and one of the largest in the country. Under the sanctuary laws, alien detention centers are banned, local law enforcement is prohibited from cooperating with ICE officials, there is limited immigration enforcement in the public schools and universities, libraries, courthouses, and hospital systems.

Massachusetts — In 2017, Massachusetts became a sanctuary state, which led to an increase in the non-citizen population, and the town of Cambridge has laws that stop police from arresting non-citizens for driving without a license.

New Jersey — In 2019, New Jersey's sanctuary city's policies went into effect as a result of a directive issued in 2018 by Gruibir Grewal, the Attorney General at the time, although, there has been push back from some towns in the state against the executive action by Attorney Gen. Grewal.

New York — In 2017, New York became a sanctuary state and does not allow state and local law enforcement to honor ICE immigration detainers. Additionally, non-citizens are able to obtain driver's licenses.

Oregon — Oregon was the first sanctuary state to obtain the status in 1987. Public resources may not be used to arrest non-citizens if they have committed no crimes other than violations of U.S. immigration laws.

Rhode Island — Executive state agencies and state departments of corrections have been directed to cease honoring federal immigration detainers without a court order.

Vermont — In 2011, Vermont became a sanctuary state, and the Department of Motor Vehicles indicated that it would not report non-citizens to federal authorities.

Washington — In 2017, Washington became a sanctuary state and does not allow local jails to hold non-citizens on ICE detainers.

District of Columbia — In 1984, the U.S. capital city was declared a sanctuary jurisdiction, and ICE does not have to be notified of the release dates of non-citizens held in detention.

So, as things sit eleven states and the District of Columbia are going against the policies initiated by the president. They refuse to cooperate with ICE and Homeland Security, and they are providing illegals with licenses and, in some cases, allowing them to vote. Trump is not going to accept this. Like Lincoln, I expect him to act and I believe he will. Only time will tell who will win in the end, as we remember that a nation divided cannot stand…

Social Security Administration Cleans Up Records, Correctly Marks Millions as Deceased

The Social Security Administration announced on Tuesday that it has completed "the most comprehensive" cleanup of the agency's records in its 91-year history.

According to the Social Security Administration, this cleanup has involved adding 17 million "dates of death" to Social Security records that previously lacked this vital detail.

In other words, 17 million dead people with Social Security numbers were previously missing a death date at the agency.

"This is the first time SSA has undertaken an effort of this scale, and I am proud of the work we have done to strengthen the foundation of identity data relied upon throughout government and the economy," Social Security Administration Commissioner Frank Bisignano told Fox News in a statement.

The SSA also updated 25 million Social Security files that lacked citizenship information and corrected an additional 8.5 million records that contained inaccurate citizenship information.

In total, the agency "corrected" 15 percent of all active Social Security numbers.

"The Social Security Number database is our country's books and records," Bisignano's statement continued. "The database's accuracy is essential to maintaining integrity of government services for citizens."

"Accurate SSN records prevent fraud across federal programs and support the proper administration of benefits," he concluded.

This announcement from the SSA comes two months after The Washington Times published a bombshell report about a California man, Carlos Ramon Obregon, who died in 1977 during a drive-by shooting, yet somehow applied for a Social Security card 23 years later in 2000.

"Over the next 24 years, the man known to the world as Carlos Obregon would scam Social Security, the Department of Health and Human Services, the State Department, the Treasury Department and Idaho's Transportation Department, walking away with nearly $284,000 in taxpayer money," The Washington Times reported.

It wasn't until August of this year that the unnamed man pretending to be Obregon was finally held accountable for his government fraud when US District Judge David Nye sentenced him to 61 months in prison.

"Identity thieves who exploit the identities of deceased Americans cause real harm," Jonathan Kazmar, special agent in charge of the State Department's Diplomatic Security Service in San Francisco, said in a statement.

"In this case, the defendant assumed the identity of a deceased American teenager and used it for years to commit serious fraud," he added.

Critics have long wondered how many other deviants have been taking advantage of Social Security to fraudulently obtain taxpayer money.

During his work for the Department of Government Efficiency, billionaire inventor and entrepreneur Elon Musk revealed that there were hundreds of thousands, if not millions, of Americans falsely listed as alive in America's Social Security databases.

"There are FAR more 'eligible' social security numbers than there are citizens in the USA," Musk warned on the social media platform X at the time. "This might be the biggest fraud in history."

Minnesota cafe that nixed prices to become a socialist anti-ICE hub to close doors permanently

This is absolutely classic.

A Minnesota restaurant owner who nixed food prices to become a socialist anti-ICE hub is closing shop, but is reportedly on a mission to educate others on how they can follow suit.

You read that correctly.

The Modern Times Café announced it will be closing after owner Dylan Alverson eliminated prices in an ill-advised public virtue signal.

Alverson briefly rebranded his restaurant as the "Post Modern Times Cafe" in January with the announcement that the eatery would operate as a "free and donation-based restaurant" where everyone would be welcome "except ICE," Fox News Digital reported.

"We absolutely cannot go on as we have. I am sick of generating money for the soldiers in our streets and for a government that won't protect us — a government who is actively inflicting daily harm on its citizens," Alverson wrote in an Instagram post. "Effective tomorrow we are done making money for the fascists that occupy our city."

The café temporarily closed in July after operating without prices for approximately six months. It reopened in August to include prices except for 25 free meals per day, Fox reported.

Fast-forward a few short months, the business is closing for good, and Alverson has seemingly learned absolutely nothing, telling The New York Times in early October that he hopes his "zero profit" operation becomes a model for other businesses.

Alverson admitted that his policy was hard on staffers and that customers sometimes waited up to two hours for food that would (of course!) be given away for free. The café also reportedly became a hub for drug-addicted homeless folks, Fox reported.

But he still thinks it's a swell idea.

"If I can create a fundraising mechanism that can raise money to provide hospitality, we can take that program and add restaurants to it," Alverson told the Times.

Alverson used a more sobering tone in a social media post on Saturday. "For the last six years, I've been trying to prove that Modern Times can continue to exist," owner Dylan Alverson wrote. "I've exhausted every option without compromising the core fundamentals that make Modern Times what it is."

He added that the cafe will permanently close by the end of the year but hopes to use the next few months to celebrate the past 16 years of operations and become part of the conversation for other struggling businesses.

Franklin Graham Lays Out the Differences Between Parties Ahead of Midterms: 'Look Prayerfully at what Both Parties Stand For'

Graham, a vocal supporter for the principles of conservatism, provided a brief post to help Americans see some of the key differences between the two parties ahead of November 3.

"Do you know who to vote for in the midterms? Let me give you some help, but you decide," Graham said in the social media post, reminding voters that Democrats stand for open borders, taxpayer-funded benefits for noncitizens, and more.

"The Democratic Party wants open borders, while the Republican Party wants secure borders. The Democratic Party wants noncitizens to be able to vote; the Republican Party supports requiring voter ID," Graham explained. "The Democratic Party wants to give taxpayer-funded benefits like healthcare to noncitizens; the Republican Party says No to that. And there are a hundred more issues."

He added, "The choice is yours—but look prayerfully at what both parties stand for."

Graham's plea comes less than two weeks from the critical midterm election, where Democrats hope to gain a majority in the Senate and House to completely stall President Donald Trump's America First agenda and reignite lawfare for the second half of his presidency.

The Cook Political Report currently has seven Senate races listed as complete tossups, including the races in Texas between Republican Ken Paxton and Democrat James Talarico – the latter of whom has openly offered pagan prayers and denies Jesus is the only way while sitting under a pastor and mentor who doubts the resurrection of Jesus – as well as the Senate race in Kansas between Sen. Roger Marshall (R-KS) and Democrat Methodist Pastor Adam Hamilton. Similarly to the race in Texas, Hamilton also embraces unBiblical beliefs, stating in past teachings that he does not believe that an individual must know or follow Jesus Christ in their lifetime in order to be saved and spend eternity with God – a central tenet of the Christian faith. He also believes the Bible is full of errors.

On the House side, the Cook Political Report lists 21 tossup races as well. Notably, the Democrats are running openly socialist candidates in some of these races, such as Democratic Socialists of America (DSA) candidate Melat Kiros in Colorado, who calls for a Trans Bill of Rights and believes that the freedom to murder an unborn baby equals "economic freedom."

Notably, opposition to basic voter ID and immigration enforcement – identified by Graham – are just two examples of the policies Democrat candidates across the board – socialists and "moderates" alike – appear to agree on.

Trump supporters confronted with painful gas prices deliver striking response: 'I'll take that any day'

Voters at the North Carolina event backed the president's stance that the ongoing war with Iran is a 'small price to pay'

As gas prices climb amid the conflict with Iran, some of President Donald Trump's most loyal supporters say they're willing to pay more at the pump if it means keeping Tehran from obtaining a nuclear weapon — even with the midterm elections just two weeks away.

"If you're really a good American, you'll be thinking not for yourself or how much you're spending for gas. But what life is going to be like for your children, your grandchildren and great-grandchildren," one voter told Fox News Digital on Tuesday evening.

"What will they grow up to? You have to keep those people in the political regime in Iran without a nuclear weapon. If we don't do something now, isn't that worth paying another dollar a gallon?"

Fox News Digital spoke with several voters following Trump's Tuesday rally at Pitt-Greenville Airport about rising gas prices, the upcoming midterm elections and the ongoing war with Iran, which has sent oil prices surging and added to Americans' affordability concerns.

Fox News Digital spoke to North Carolina voters about the economy, Iran, and control of Congress after President Donald Trump held a rally at Pitt-Greenville Airport on Tuesday. (Fox News Digital/Charles Creitz)

"Things haven't changed much since Sleepy Joe," another local voter, Shauna, told Fox News Digital about former President Joe Biden. "At least prices. ... But [Trump is] doing the best he can with what he has. Because, you know, he's not Congress. He can only pass so much."

Another rallygoer told Fox News Digital that preventing Iran from acquiring a nuclear weapon was worth the cost of higher gas prices for American drivers.

TRUMP VOTERS SAY COSTS ARE CRUSHING THEIR WALLETS — BUT LOOK PAST PRESIDENT FOR BLAME

"We believed in what he [Trump] was saying and what he stood for," local voter Michael told Fox News Digital. "And you hear people today saying, 'Y'all wanted to get politicians out of Washington.' ... We got a businessman in. [He] never claimed to be a politician. He's a businessman.

"Even with the gas prices up for what he's done in Iran," he added. "To me [that] is worth the high gas prices. I'll take that any day to stop a country like Iran and take that nuclear power away. That's a no-brainer, you know. Now, will the gas prices come down? Absolutely. They will come down because of what he's done."

Another Trump supporter, Steve, told Fox News Digital he would encourage other Americans to vote for GOP candidates despite high prices.

"It would take an act of God to lower prices before this election is over," he said. "But I highly stress to everybody to vote Republican like you are voting like it's the most important election in your lifetime. Because in many instances, it actually is."

Trump has maintained that the ongoing war with Iran is a "small price to pay" to keep the nation safe.

The president has been crisscrossing the country in the final weeks before the Nov. 3 midterm elections, rallying his supporters in an effort to boost Republican candidates and help the GOP retain control of Congress. His North Carolina stop was aimed in part at bolstering Republican Senate candidate Michael Whatley, who is facing former Democratic Gov. Roy Cooper.

Most religious leaders look to Islam as one of the three Abrahamic religions that came out of the Middle East. It is not. For one thing, it came out of Arabia, Mohammad never stepping foot in Israel.

The only connection to Abraham was Ishmael himself, the first son of Abraham born to an Egyptian woman. Isaac was his half-brother born to Abraham's wife, Sarah. Hagar and Ishmael were banished from Abraham's camp, but God promised Hagar protection and that Ishmael would be father to a great nation, the Twelve Tribes of the Ishmaelites.

The rest of the Bible describes the events concerning Isaac who begot Jacob, whose name changed to Israel, thus the Israelites and the Ishmaelites. And the story of Islam is Mohammad trying to take the covenant between Abraham and Isaac and 'switch tracks' to Ishmael.

It took ten years for Mohammad to go from camel driver to warlord to religious leader. He died a wealthy man with multiple wives, his last marriage to a six-year old. He claimed to be a Prophet, greater than the Christ; but when he died he left his household and armies in disarray, the Islamic religion today still broken into two warring factions. And those two sects of Islam are fighting the Christian and Jewish world still to this day.

ISLAM IS BASED ON A FRAUD

Mohammad claimed his elevation to prophet was decreed by an angel, Gabriel. But the apostles, from Galatians to Revelation banned such angelic influence, the 'scrolls closed,' not to be added to or subtracted from. (Galatians 1:8, Revelation 22:18-19)

Mohammad misinterpreted John 14-15 to claim he was the 'paraclete' or 'helper.' (Compare this to the Christian sect of Montanism.) 'Paraclete,' from the Greek scriptures, is the 'helper' promised by the Christ to be there for the Christians after he was gone. Mohammad took it upon himself (perhaps coached by a member of a Christian sect, like Montanism) to declare himself to be that 'helper,' but as a Prophet Greater than Christ, not God's Holy Spirit as traditionally interpreted.

He also fabricated a story of the baby Jesus proclaiming the future Mohammad to be the 'Ahmad,' (Surah 61:6) a Greater Prophet coming after him—which is nowhere in the Bible and hard to conceive happening at all. And Mohammad backed up this claim by employing an army of fellow criminals, looters, rapists, slavers, and those merely lusting for power.

Compare this to the victory of the Christ over the sins of mankind, and His acts, teachings, and miracles. Christ wouldn't fight or harm those who resisted Him. He made his point saying, "Don't you know that I could ask my Father, and He would at once send me more than twelve armies of angels?" Matthew 26:53 His conquests were personal and through the 'Word,' while Mohammad's were brutal and by the Sword.

Mohammad ignored thousands of years of Bible history claiming it was Ishmael, not Isaac, who inherited God's blessings through Abraham—which is why the Temple Mount, the Al-Aqsa Mosque, is one of Islam's holiest sites, occupying the spot where the Biblical story of Abraham and Isaac was claimed to have taken place. The covenant between God and Abraham, according to Mohammad, was not for Isaac but Ishmael–Mohammad claiming Arabs to be the Ishmaelites–is not in the Bible or any archaeological record. (Surah 37:102-109) Contrarily, we have the entire genealogy from Isaac through David to Jesus in the Bible. While Ishmael was, technically the firstborn son of Abraham, it was not to Abraham's legitimate wife.

Ishmael built the Kaaba?

This would make the Kaaba over 4000-years old.

The Quran states, in Surah 2:127-128, that Abraham and Ishmael built the Kaaba, the big black cube in Mecca where millions of Muslims pilgrimage every year. This is another way the Quran tries to connect itself to Ishmael. The Kaaba was the center of pre-Islamic religion, a 'house of idols,' which Mohammad converted as a temple to Islam's Allah. And any of his fellow Meccans who doubted him were threatened with violence. But, that was how Mohammad promoted his new 'monotheism; with intimidation, murder, assassination, and massacre.

Therefore, the Muslim religion is a crime, a fraud perpetrated with thousands of criminal conspirators murdering, looting, burning, and enslaving for centuries–demanding tribute. It is a nation of thieves declaring war on all who reject their demands of subjection and, now, through the Iranian Shi-ite Muslims, even threatening nuclear war. Thomas Jefferson and James Madison faced this, and went to war with Islam. And now so should we.

We have no choice but to challenge Islam with these facts; and if they do not cease and desist the only option is to deport them and fight them. Mohammad misinterpreted a single verse of the bible to raise himself up above the Christ. When his words rang false to those who rejected him he didn't argue or provide proof, he just killed those who resisted him.

And that is why Islam's primary religious tenet is to kill all Jews and Christians, because they are the 'People of the Book' that disproves his claims and undermines his religion. There is no argument or reasoning, Muslims just declaring, 'It is a miracle,' and then killing you if you don't submit.

After the 1993 bombing of the World Trade Center, Muslims should have been barred from immigration and naturalization–and that includes from unconstitutional 'birthright' citizenship. Actually, under current statutes they are. See 8 USC 1401, Title 8 Ch 1 Sub Ch C Part 316 §316.10 (b)(2)(ix). See also 8 USC 1182 (10).

After the 2001 terrorist attack on the World Trade Center, the Pentagon, and the plane bound for either the White House or Congress, Muslims should have been barred from commercial air travel and their mosques closed.

But, ignorance is pandemic and all 'liberals' will tell you that Muslims have First Amendment rights. Well, after 1404-years of war against Christians and Jews, not only should citizenship be denied but their Second Amendment rights should also be forfeit.

With this basic information you don't have to study the Koran for years, or become a ible scholar. It is this simple. And we are only just starting to fight back. We are rounding up the Somalian Muslims who have perpetrated billions in Medicare fraud and election mail ballot fraud. Texas is just starting to fight against the dozens of mosques being built around Dallas and Plano.

I tried to distill the essence of Islam into how it differs so much from the bible, and why violence is its only conclusion. I cite mainly the Koran and the bible, but much of my opinion also relies on the following books and U.S. immigration and nationality statute.
